TUESDAY EVENING, JULY 31

A Brave Conductor. Conductor Frescoln, in a long conversation with a reporter of the Pottsville Miners' Jour nal, gives a detailed account of the trouble he bad in getting his train through from Philadelphia to Pottsville on Monday evening. On leaving Philade'phia he said, he had intima tions of probable trouble on the road At Birds-boro' he received a dispatch f om Mr. Eltz, at Reading warning him to run slowly on nearing Reading for fear of obstructions. Below Eck ert's jurnace his train had to cross over to the down track, as the up track was obstructed by coal trains whi h had been stopped during the d.y. Coming up into the city Engineer Sava co.d saw that there was an immense mob gathered a organd on the track. Nearing Penn at the track was sen to be solidly packed with people. He took the only course possible for him—he opened his throttle wide, put the whis tie on and dashed right at the mob. They saw he meant business as d got out of the way The train , assed l'enn street at the rate of 45 miles per bour. Just before reaching that point a c r load of coal lying on the track where it had been dumined by the rioters had to be passed. It is a wonder the train did n t jump the track, bu. fortunately the engine threw he coal in every direction as d pessed on. While going through the crowd the train had to run the gauntlet of a shower of stones Une of these entered the par lor car, but without doing any damage Several stones struck the fireman. Wm. Blackburn, of Schusikill Haven. One of these, as large as a m-n s fi t, he saw coming and grabbed for it. The sio e struck his hard and libert the same time He was badly but not seriously hurt, and came up on the tr in to his home-Lot, however doing daty from Reading up. James Fish of Rea inc, vocunteered to fice for Cassidy, and perform d that duty satisfact rily. When the crowd separate and let the train pass it sped on to the depot, where everything was quiet. The passengers essecially the ladies were in a panic. Concuctor Fr scoin here took charge of several ladi-s to escort them into the waiting room. He had not gone far when he became aware that he mob had followed the train from Penn street Their first act was to attack Engi neer bavacool, whem they dragged from his ca boose, knocked down and beat very bidly, perhaps danger usly. One scoundrel struck him with a large stone He saved his life by making a desperate effort and getting on his feet. He ran, bleeding and brused into the depot, about fly of the mob in hot pursuit. The doors of the vestibule were closed on the pursu rs and theerg neer was say d The crowd then rushed back to the track, some of then dashing into the cars and ordering the pasengers out. They sold they were going to up-et the cars and set them on fire. Here it was that women fainted and children screamed. A party of the rioters mounted the engine and tender, and one of their number, who knew very little about an ergine, started to back the train, with the intention of running it into the cal cars on the up track to wreck it. Fortunate ly the amsteur or gineer put on the air brakes and supped the train. He did not know how to lit ham, at doo the train escaped that danger About the time half a dez n pelice, supposed to te men bers fibe Coa and fron Police, appeared, armed with Winchester : fles, as d charged the mob from the platform. They did not date to fire for f ar of hitting some of the passenger . They were urged to stand firmand keep the mob back, but were unable to do so, t e rioters su ging back and regaining their lost ground ton ductor Frescoit W s at this time in a desperate position. He took up a position on the platform of the mail car, and was surrounded by the mob. some of whom began to say, "He's the fellow who urg dant once to file on s." etc. Mr. Frescoin said they were must ken in their man. but they insisted that they had the right man Things were looking very squalty, when a man nam d Graeff, a personal friend of Mr Frescoln. came up and said be didn'tthink Fre-coln was the man; that he was triendly to the men, and was only on the train in the discharge of his duty Mr. Frescoln then bad a talk with Graeff, who was formerly a Polladelphia and Reading Rollroad engineer. He told Graeff that he aid the mob were stop; ing the United tates mail, a serious offence. Graeff said he had not suspect ed that fact, and to d the conductor that he could cut the mail car off and proceed with that This did not satisfy Mr. Fr scoln, to whom we take the liberty flaying great credit is due for coolness, bravery and erelatence in the discharge of his duty. He ask d why it was that the mob Wanted to stopped passengers Their detention could not harm the c mpany, as they had already paid for their tickets. There were ladies and children there who wanted to get to their homes The representations had the desired eff-ct and Graeff sait the train might go. The quest on of an engineer then arose. Said Mr. Fe-coln:- You've killed my engineer, a.d you d sill any other." Graeff said he would
